

We limit the amount of TV that our children watch because of the amount of violence, sexual innuendos, and immodest attire portrayed. Even the cartoons are not immune to these as they portray fighting, violence and disrespect. Our younger children are drawn to these cartoons. Their interactions with siblings are frequently contentious and accusatory. They are also disrespectful at times to us as parents. We try to restrict their viewing to public television broadcasts or others we feel are appropriate.